

Awakening Minds in Music

The intent of the music curriculum is to help students develop critical thinking skills and an ability to articulate their personal tastes and opinions in relation to music and the world around them. Students will grow into passionate subject specialists with an intrinsic desire for ongoing development in the subject. Through practical application of skills students will develop the ability to play and perform music, whilst also learning the theory which sits alongside these practical skills. Students will also develop their ability to evaluate and discuss the musical aspects of music that they enjoy or find interesting.

Achieving Dreams in Music

The music curriculum is designed to encourage students to become more confident and is ambitious in the topics covered. Many of the skills that are vital in learning music are also vital skills that students will need for the future; particularly the ability to not give up on a goal and realise that they can achieve great things. Regular links are made to possible careers and raising aspiration, with the aim of opening their eyes to the possibilities of their future.

Serving Others in Music

In music, much of our work is evidenced through performance. In this area we are careful to instill respectful and supportive values which are actively practiced in the classroom each lesson. In addition to regular performances in class, we aim to start building links within our local community, allowing students to further develop by being part of a wider community, built through music and performance.
